Course Description

Social Entrepreneurship is a rapidly growing area in Ireland and internationally, as businesses can no longer operate in isolation from social, environmental and political challenges. When considering climate change trends, economic inequality, and political instability, arguably, those challenges, are existential and urgent. This course develops a critical awareness of major issues, opportunities, and problems associated with social entrepreneurship in Ireland and internationally. Students examine the theoretical underpinnings of social entrepreneurship and social venture development and analyze patterns of social entrepreneurial behavior. Students work with theory, cases, and their own social entrepreneurial projects to identify how social entrepreneurship can respond to and even drive social-economic-political change.
