Course Description
This course considers the contemporary global city as a site of both injustice and movements for justice. Students explore contemporary debates about justice, as well as how the injustices experienced in contemporary urban life challenge and disrupt conventional thinking about justice. The course examines diverse political movements fighting for justice within contemporary cities (in both the global north and the global south) by looking at discourses of the just city and the right to the city, as well as movements addressing issues such as housing, racial discrimination, police violence, and inequality.
