Course Description
This course introduces students to German texts of the Middle Ages from a linguistic perspective. The class familiarizes students with the writing system, phonology, morphology and sentence structure of Middle High German. Topics include graphematics and phonetic processes, which take place from Middle to New High German, peculiarities of the inflectional system of verbs and nouns, possibilities of sentence-linking, labeling of sentence negation and use of genitive. In addition, students explore how word meanings and their development can be understood. The goal of this course is to teach students how to apply linguistic techniques of indexing, analyzing and translating Middle High German texts with the help of dictionaries and grammar books.
