Course Description

This course focuses on how Europe was defined through war, military occupations, civil conflicts, and peace agreements in the 19th and 20th centuries. Drawing on examples of various conflicts, students discuss several major questions: How did international and civil conflicts shape European culture and politics? Why was the 20th century so violent? How did Europe become divided into “right” and “left,” and “East” and “West”? How are these conflicts and political extremes remembered or forgotten today?
