Course Description

The course offers students "Danish Perspectives" to a wide range of fields within arts and the humanities. Students gain an overview of Danish history, but also Danish culture and religion. Throughout the course students discuss how one can describe the Danes as a people – while at the same time being critical as to whether it is possible to determine a people in such a stereotypical way at all. The course provides a general introduction to various perspectives of Danish culture ranging from literature, music, film, and TV to the narrative culture of the Vikings, the Danish history of slavery, and the perceived particularities of Danish identity and Nordic "exceptionalism."
