Course Description
This course undertakes a critical examination of the terms culture and society and to what extent they are useful in understanding social relations in modern contexts. In so doing, the course draws on anthropological and comparative sociological perspectives. The course provides an analytical lens to learn how cultures affect social behavior and how different cultures interact with each other in the contemporary world. We shall discuss issues related to "ethnocentrism", "cultural relativism", “hybrid cultures". In this sphere such topics as travel and encounters, magic, kinship, transnationalism, and globalization are explored
