Course Description

This workshop encourages reflection on public affairs problems by teaching and questioning things such as lobbying and its place in public politics. The goals are: demystify lobbying by approaching it from a legal point of view, using concrete examples; examine its place in the Republic, by using political science, history, and comparative law (USA, European Union); look with a critical eye at lobbying and the criticism of lobbying; offer a first experience of lobbying as seen from the inside.
