Course Description

This course traces the development of literature by writers of African, or African-related origin, from 18th century poet Phyllis Wheatley to the present. Particular attention is paid to historical and cultural contexts that bear on these writers' subjectivities as they are constructed and ultimately revised. The materials of this course are configured around several periods of historical crisis in the United States, and in the world at large, when various groups sought to define, assert, revise, or resist the concept of "black".
