Course Description

The elective in the field of sociology examines issues of power and domination, as well as the relationship of both to the concept of democracy. It applies of classic and contemporary perspectives of social and political theory to four questions: what is "power"; what are their modes of constitution or expression in different institutions/social spaces (state, market, families, etc.); what distinguishes "power" from "domination"; and finally, what are the consequences of these conceptual distinctions for the idea of "democracy"?
