Course Description

The course covers financial statements mainly from an investor's perspective. It provides the information in financial statements and technical tools for analyzing and valuing companies and communication. This course is designed to take the students beyond the routine filling of boxes with standard financial ratios. The primary focus of the course is not on the accounting rules, but the use of accounting information. We will use firms' publicly available financial statements to assess current performance, forecast future performance and estimate fundamentals of the firm.
