Course Description

This course examines the nature of theater and film in Australian cultural and educational settings. A particular focus is placed on theater and film for and by young people, and the range of learning that takes place through young people's engagement in, and appreciation of, theater and film. In addition, the role and nature of Australian film and theater is placed within an international context to examine the international forces influencing Australian culture. Indigenous issues in Australian film and theater are also examined. The course includes field trips to significant theater performances and festivals, Australian school performances and the viewing of Australian films.
