Course Description

This course rests on the premise that the nineteenth century matters today, for it unleashed and solidified the main forces and ideologies shaping our lives as 21st-century global citizens: Capitalism, Marxism, Feminism, White Supremacy, Anti-racism, Environmentalism, etc. Course readings enable us to grapple with the complexity of this period as well as to rethink contemporary conflicts and crises: Is Whitman's vision of democracy applicable today? What does the #MeToo movement owe to Charlotte Perkins Gillman? Do we live and work like Bartleby? What do we learn about freedom today by reading a slave narrative published 150 years ago?
