Course Description

This literature course develops independent thought and the ability to communicate information effectively. Students are encouraged to work independently, to discover and synthesize information, and to select the most relevant materials from a wide range of reading. Students learn how to assess the reliability of evidence and weigh a variety of competing or conflicting arguments, to analyze complex questions, to exercise problem-solving skills, and, in the developing and organizing of arguments, students learn how to present a coherent, reasoned, and well-supported set of conclusions in clear prose. Reading list includes: Jane Austen, NORTHANGER ABBEY, Charles Dickens, HARD TIMES, Elizabeth Gaskell, NORTH AND SOUTH, Mary Shelley, FRANKENSTEIN, and Walter Scott, IVANHOE, among others.
