Course Description

This course is designed for students with no prior knowledge of the Arabic language. The course employs student-centered methods to introduce basic grammatical structures and sound patterns of Arabic with attention to mastery of script, pronunciation, and listening comprehension. It focuses on reading and writing using Arabic script and verbal communication by forming phrases and simple sentences. The course develops language and skills (reading, writing, speaking, and listening) at the Novice-Mid level of the ACTFL Guidelines for proficiency and introduces culturally appropriate social interactions. Course highlights include the Arabic alphabet and sound system, correct pronunciation of Arabic sounds, writing accurately from dictation, initiating social interactions and asking for basic information, interpreting basic cultural aspects of social interaction in the Arab world, and composing simple sentences about one's self.
