Course Description
This course explores the term “Political Islam” by offering a historical and thematic survey of political Islamic thought and practice. The course discusses questions including: What is the phenomenon of Political Islam and why did it arise? Who are its principal thinkers and from which segment of the population does it draw the bulk of its support? How does it organize itself? What are its national, global, social, economic, and political demands? To what extent can we refer to Political Islam as a single movement – “it” – and, if we cannot, what binds diverse political Islamic groups together?
