Course Description

This course offers an introduction of corpus linguistics for graduate students, including the necessary tools, techniques, and analysis methodologies for doing corpus-based studies and corpus annotation projects. Existing major corpora are scrutinized for a better understanding of their linguistic uses. The course enables students to make, annotate and search corpora, as well as to perform a quantitative analysis of some linguistic phenomenon. Students will also gain hands-on experience in these areas by working on a specific topic of their own interest.
