Course Description
In recent years, Islam has increasingly become the subject of public debate and discourse in the Western World as well as a core research topic in various disciplines in the social sciences. This course takes an in-depth look at Muslims and Islam in Europe and analyzes and discusses the present condition of Muslims living in Europe from a socio-anthropological perspective. In order to do so, Islam is first introduced from a general perspective. The first sessions of the course provide a review of theories of cultural difference and secularism. Having established this theoretical lens, the following sessions look at various public discourses regarding Islam and Muslims in Europe. Here, issues such as Islam-state relations, gender aspects, and everyday religious practices of Muslims in Europe are closely examined, accompanied by a critical analysis of particular public controversies regarding Islam. To get a good insight, various excursions are made.
