Course Description
The very existence and the radical enlargement of the European Union is becoming one of the defining events of the early twenty-first century. The course discusses the history and ideology of the European unification process. The emergence and transformation of political institutions is an essential part of the course. The collapse of communist regimes in Central and Eastern Europe posed new challenges that lead to the necessity to write a new comprehensive document: the Lisbon Treaty. Students examine both the current monetary crisis and the political process in respective member states. The course addresses topics including the history and the motives of the emergence of the EU on the European continent; the interdependence of economic, political, and cultural phenomena on the European continent; and the issues arising from the future possible enlargement of the EU in the changing geopolitical context.
