Course Description

This course examines contemporary social theory in the study of injustice and social conflicts. Topics include: the neoliberal understanding of social injustice and the idea of justice as "equity" (Rawls), and its critics; Axel Honneth's theory of social experiences of contempt and its relation to "struggles for recognition;" and Nancy Fraser's theory about the plurality of gender injustices and their insertion in current debates about identities, recognition and participation (in particular, her discussion with Judith Butler).
