Course Description

The course provides a deepened overview of macroeconomic theory. The content of the course mainly focuses on business cycle fluctuations, unemployment, inflation, the current account, and fiscal and monetary policy. The analysis is extended to include the fact that economic agents are forward-looking, which considerably deepens the insights into the determination and development of a country's consumption, investment, current account, and economic policy. In addition, the course contains the IS–LM model that is important for analysis of economic policy.
