Course Description

The announcement that the world is ending has entered into public debate. The signs are all there: global warming, sixth extinction, the destruction of ecosystems. In this course students consider if the imminence of the Apocalypse is changing radical thinking in politics and what type of politics can be imagined if we are entering into the End of Days. This is the jumping off point of this seminar which proposes to study the politics at the dawn of another threat. The most contemporary theories are studied—collapsology, Anthropocene, survivalism, as well as older theories.
