Course Description

The purpose of this course is to clarify phenomena and problems that are inherent in the market economy by an examination of the laws and economic systems that support the internal and contractual structure of the market. In particular, the course focuses on Coase Theorem and its application to nuisance law, sales law, and tort law. This is a lecture course, but students are expected to work on "legal cases" into three groups (plaintiff, defendant, and judge) in each class, and are expected to participate in the deliberations of the cases among the three groups.
