Course Description

Ethical choices are unavoidable in business. This course presents how to articulate your options when confronted with an ethical dilemma in business, and make well-informed judgements about the right thing to do. The course considers a range of problems, from issues that could arise in a first job to questions of business regulation that you may one day face as a leader in commerce or government. In each case, the course challenges and assists you to recognize ethical problems in practical situations, understand the possible solutions, and make reasoned decisions. Assessment: coursework (40%), and final exam (60%).
