Course Description
The course encourages students to grow and extend their practice both within and out of the confines of the college environment and reach a broader, more diverse audience. Students are encouraged to reflect on their art practice in relation to the wider current and historic contexts. They work independently in conjunction with a number of cross-school studio critiques, project space presentations, and regular tutorial support. External exhibition opportunities, invited artists, gallery visits, lectures, and workshops contribute to learning. Students test how artworks are installed, received, and understood professionally by participating in an external exhibition and collaborating with their peers across the school in the development and implementation of other external opportunities.
