Course Description
This course explores the boundary between artwork, publication, and portfolio. The unit acquaints students with the basics of InDesign, a software program that has become industry standard for designing digital and paper publications. Focusing on experimental magazines and other small scale artist's publications the unit explores the visual language of contemporary publishing from an artist's perspective. It examines the complex interplay of text, image, and sequence involved in producing multipage documents/artworks through the practical experience of creating work in InDesign.
