Course Description

This course explores the characteristics and problems of Mexican literature of the period between the Restored Republic and the military rule of Porfirio Díaz, and relates literary discourse of the period with the political events and cultural landscape. The course covers the results of a search for a national expression that began in the early period covered by this course as well as contributions of Modernism to Mexican culture. Special focus is placed on the development of the short story. Authors covered in class include Manuel Payno, Vicente Riva Palacio, Ignacio Manuel Altamirano, Guillermo Prieto, Manuel Gutiérrez Nájera, and Ignacio Rodríguez Galván. In depth reading and critical analysis of the required texts is a required component of the course.
