Course Description

This course focuses on the study of northeast Asia as one of the most politically and diplomatically dynamic regions in international relations. It discusses the conceptual framework of northeast Asia in regards to the grand landscape of international politics. It deals with various issues in this region including ROK-U.S./Japan-U.S. Alliance, competition and cooperations among various players (U.S., China, Japan, Russia, and two Koreas), the rise of China, and North Korea in regional politics. The course focuses is on three issues: North Korean politics in regional perspectives, the future of ROK-U.S. Alliance, and the rise of China.
