Course Description
This course follows Australian protest movements across the last century. Topics include struggles over labor rights and working conditions in the 1900s, women's suffrage, Aboriginal land rights, race relations and the White Australia Policy, homelessness during the Great Depression, freedom of speech during the Cold War, the Vietnam Moratorium and sexual liberation in the 1970s, the environmental movement, refugees and asylum seekers, and LGBT rights today. In the process changing ideas about government, community and identity are explored while conducting individual research projects through local archives.
