Course Description
This course surveys the evolution of Christianity from a local to a global religion and its impact on Western and global history. It traces the development of various branches of Christianity (Catholic, Orthodox, Protestant) and how the conflicts among them shaped European history, and the role of religion in American history. It explores the linkages between missionary efforts and imperialism, as well as the consequences of conversion in colonial societies around the world, and how Christianity has been linked to ethnicity and nationalism in the post-colonial nation-states and how it is now developing in a global context.
