Course Description
This course provides an overview of basic perspectives on communication. It functions as an introduction to children's oral and written language development from pre-school to early teenage years, with a particular focus on minority children's language. Topics covered include development of oral and written language, socio-cultural sources, concepts and words, and children's development and production of expanded forms of discourse and text. Students review and discuss these topics to lead to further discussion regarding the particular challenges that are related to facilitation in minority children's learning situations.
