Course Description

This course covers the different groups that are or have been at some point in American history considered as minorities: ethno-racial minorities (especially African Americans, Hispanics, Asian Americans, Native Americans), immigrants, women, but also sexual minorities, religious minorities, and people with disabilities. Various issues are discussed such as the genesis of the notion of “minority,” discrimination, minority rights, and identity politics. By the end of the students can: understand past and current public policy debates in the United States regarding minorities; analyze these debates using the theoretical frameworks provided in class; draw connections between the policies pertaining to different minority groups.
