Course Description

This course looks at how one's voice is made and how one uses and modulates it. The course provides understanding of the physiological processes that produce voice and the relationship between mind and body in vocal communication. This practical workshop uses techniques developed by actors and singers that improve the resonance and musicality of the speaking voice and also vocal strength and endurance. Using verse, prose and dramatic text, students work on vocal characteristics - pitch, intonation patterns, pace and pausing, placement to improve their oral delivery.
