Course Description
From the first stage of rapid urban growth in the Northeast to the current rise of post-industrial cities in the West and South, this course focuses on the character and history of major American cities such as New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, Detroit, Los Angeles, Atlanta, and New Orleans. Woven into their unique histories are key elements of the United States' political, social, cultural and economic history. Using texts, maps, movies, music, the course explores the rich history of urban America from the early nineteenth century to the twenty-first century.
