Course Description
The course is designed to help students to build a strong theoretical background and practice using theoretical knowledge in Journalism. During the first half of the semester, students focus on learning theories, which are tested in the mid-term. During the second half of the semester, students work on some news stories as projects to be presented to the class and also listen to guest speakers, foreign correspondents from foreign media stationed in South Korea. The schedule for the guest speakers is subjected to change based on the needs of the guest speakers and the lecturer. Text: John R. Bender & Lucinda D. Davenport, REPORTING FOR THE MEDIA.
