Course Description
In this studio course students examine content, context, methodology and the role of critical dialogue in the production of contemporary art. Study is undertaken through a series of studio projects, media workshops, and a programme of gallery visits and guest speakers. Students attend studio to make work independently and develop works based on their personal ideas and skills. It is open to students to decide how to create sophisticated well thought out works of art. Students are instructed to create an IPO (Independent Project Outline) which states students intentions and goals.
