Course Description

This course is an intensive examination of the importance of multicultural competence for the 21st century. It focuses on increasing students' cross-cultural awareness, knowledge, and skills to respond appropriately to the problems and opportunities of both domestic and international demographic changes and globalization. The role of professional education is to engage students in a redefinition of their professional and cultural identity to include civic responsibility for themselves and their profession, with a personal commitment to a deeper engagement with the world society. This engagement requires cross cultural and global understanding. This course provides appreciation of the complexity and dynamics involved in globalization, enhances self-reflection of culture in relation to other cultures, and develops a cross-cultural understanding of other societies. Additionally, the multidisciplinary nature of this course provides opportunity for multilevel discussions and interventions (individual, group, organizational, and institutional) as students investigate cross cultural dilemmas and challenges.
