Course Description
This course provides a study of early cinema and documentary cinema. It approaches the crossroads of documentary between the avant-garde, the narrative cinema, and the factual. It examines this history of cinema, memory, and archives through a compilation of films and found footage, the limits of the visible and the images of excess. Other topics include, fake documentaries (fakes and mocks), the documentary of the “I” (in the pre – youtube era), the film essay and the technology behind the documentary, and contemporary Spanish documentary in particular.
