Course Description
This course explores 18th century travel literature and the ways nation, identity, and cultural difference were established, tested, and changed. This course looks at how 18th-century travelers wrote about their experiences, asked questions, and used their imaginations. The selection of authors includes travelers to Europe, around Britain, to the South Seas, Scandinavia, and the previously unexplored regions of the air. It explores a wide range of topics such as fantasy, satire, sensibility, nature, religion and progress, the body, gender, class, ethnicity, race, and cultural difference.
