Course Description

This course lays the foundations for knowledge of international law and European law, in particular institutional law, with regard to the major questions of the modern international system based on history, on contemporary issues, and by presenting international actors and Europeans. The approach goes beyond the agreed media discourse in order to better understand the fundamental aspects of our international environment of today and tomorrow. Students have to assimilate and understand the major questions of international and European law (sovereignty, integration, notion of global law, status of European law), the different modes of regulation of international relations and know the actors of international and European systems (States, large organizations, European Union institutions) and their relationships with private actors (companies, NGOs, individuals).
