Course Description
This course focuses on urbanization processes in the Global South, with a specific focus on sub-Saharan Africa. A multiplicity of contemporary issues related to this process are discussed. Particular topics of interest are in-migration, livelihoods, planning, slums, and land tenure. Attention is then turned to the urban-rural distinction, the political city, boom towns. Urbanization in the Global North is challenged, supported by, or made redundant by urbanization process in the Global South, therefore the course looks at theories on urbanization from the Global South.
