Course Description

This course presents the social, political and cultural characteristics of the Nordic countries and how the modern Nordic countries and societies – taken as a whole – can be distinguished from other social, political and cultural systems. Examining the 'Nordic model' and its sustainability, each lecture explores a specific theme, ranging from macro-historical comparisons, through decentralization policies, changes and challenges to the welfare state, its multiculturalism, family policies, welfare governance, higher education, and health policies. The course explores the rich sociocultural aspects of Nordic societies, covering also themes such as sustainable development and Nordic sustainability experiences, and developments in the aquaculture sector.
