Course Description

This course provides an introduction to the study of the development of children and adolescents. Students learn about the changes that occur across different domains of development throughout infancy, childhood and adolescence. In addition, students learn about developmental theories, themes and concepts, and about the methods involved in developmental research. The course also addresses critical issues and frameworks that shape how we understand and study development, such as the interacting roles of nature and nurture in development, debates about continuity and discontinuity in development, the influence of the socio-cultural context on development, the role of children in their own development, and the interaction of the social, cognitive and biological domains in development.
