Course Description
The Global Migration Legal Clinic provides the skills and knowledge necessary to excel in a changing global legal environment by providing the opportunity to learn by doing and by providing service to the community. Students in this Clinic are tasked with focusing on specific legal cases and problems, and devising holistic solutions to said problems. While their solutions obviously involve legal recourse or research of some kind, students are required to also consider broader solutions, including: education and community legal empowerment, media and social media exposure, lobbying, and commercial solutions. This course covers the challenges and skills of affecting real change in real-life situations; expands opportunities for collaborative experiential learning; examines the theory and practice of various legal disciplines; gives students an opportunity to practice their professional skills and ethics; encourages students to identify and provide service for unmet legal needs; and encourages critical analysis of the law, the relationship between international and domestic legal systems, and the clients' place and the lawyer's role within the international legal system.
