Course Description

This course introduces the idea that space is lived and experienced as part social and cultural life. Drawing from the arts, food, sports and film, and/or other related topics, the course delves into critical developments in social and cultural geography and provides students with the foundational knowledge to read advanced courses in the sub-discipline. It introduces methodological approaches which include ‘ways of seeing’ and ‘landscape as text' and is critical to understanding the human/culture and environment/space relationship.
