Course Description

Administration is the study of administrative operations and management. It is a very important part of government operations; government operations largely rely on administrators and the administrative system to operate stably. The course covers various theories of administration; the structure and characteristics of the administrative department; the input and output of administrative operations (such as personnel administration, financial administration, and public policy, etc.), and the relationship between the administrative department and other departments (including political with administrative relations, governance, with non-profit organizations, etc.). This course also tries to bring in relevant practical cases so that students can understand theory.
