Course Description
This course explores religious and ritual phenomena and the key theoretical issues by examining ethnographic material that deals with initiation, myth, witchcraft, symbolism, and religious experience. Some "secular" rituals such as carnival and Christmas are also analyzed. The focus is as much on how people believe as on what they believe; on why they perform rituals and what these rituals look like. It explores both classic texts and more recent accounts, to give students a sense of where particular arguments have come from and where they are going.
