Course Description
This course will function as a study of social entrepreneurs in different contexts, and introduction to valuable tools for creative thinking and solutions in addressing social problems. Through engagement with guest lectures and practitioners in social enterprise, students learn how social entrepreneurship can be represented as a force for social change, combining both theory and practice relating to social impact and social innovation. The course will be a combination of lectures, workshops, presentations, consultations, and class participation—all of which will culminate in the proposal, presentation, and execution of the student's own social enterprise.
