Course Description

This intermediate Chinese language course is for students who have taken Intermediate Chinese I or have taken at least 350 hours (6 hours per week) of Chinese language instruction. The course develops proficient language skills in listening, speaking, reading, and writing, for students to communicate effectively in their daily lives. The course instructs on vocabulary and grammar that are not often used in daily conversations. Students learn to express one's opinions effectively; write a short essay of at least 400 words; and communicate about daily life activities all in Chinese, leading to a greater understanding of Taiwanese culture and language. The course utilizes the textbooks, Far East Everyday Chinese II(B) or A Course in Contemporary Chinese III.
