Course Description

This intermediate Chinese language course is for students who have taken Intermediate Chinese II or have taken at least 450 hours (6 hours per week) of Chinese language instruction. The course develops proficient language skills in listening, speaking, reading, and writing, for students to communicate effectively in their daily lives. The course instructs on vocabulary and grammar that are not often used in daily conversations, such as discussing the economy, transportation, society, culture, and people. Students also gain competence in writing a short essay of at least 500 words. The course utilizes the textbook, A Course in Contemporary Chinese IV.
