Course Description

The course covers linguistic behavior (speaking, writing, and gestures), production, perception, and understanding processes, as well as language acquisition. The course provides an increased understanding of the language acquisition process and how natural language is processed by language users in both production and perception. For example, it covers first language acquisition in children and second language learning in older children and adults as well as different theories of how language is processed from the point of view of behavioral science and neurocognition and methods for how these can be tested. Theories of language processing and acquisition of phonology, morphology, and syntax as well as semantics and vocabulary, are illustrated with and applied to authentic examples.
